

The Value of Bush

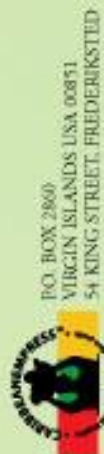

Before pharmacies, clinics, hospitals, doctors, there was bush. More than 70% of the people in the world use bush for food, medicine, and homecare. Bush is the home healthcare to millions of persons all over the world that cannot afford the convenience of modern Medicine, packaged foods and comfort consumables.

Bush medicine is traditional herbal medicine, the oldest system of healing in the world. Some say bush medicine started over 30, 000 years ago. In Africa-Caribbean cultures plants and herbs are referred to as bush and are revered for their healing and spiritual properties. Every culture in the world practiced and still practice medicine to treat physical, emotional, mental and spiritual problems of the people. It is the primary source of healthcare among 70% of the world's population. Many have tried to discredit bush medicine while at the same time sending ethno-botanist around the world to acquire the knowledge of local plants from bush doctors to make new pharmaceuticals-drugs. Often locals are not compensated; plants are patented and governments are pressured into banning the local population from access or many plants are declared toxic, poisonous and containing toxic properties.
